Important Note: Prior to the meeting, Sohrab shared with the group two interesting cases. Two (unrelated) men had gone to astrologers years ago, and in both cases the astrologers had predicted exit points in their distant futures.

Case 1: The man was told he would not live to see the millennium. Towards the end of 1999, he kept saying to his family "Shall I extend this?" He passed over a couple of days prior to the end of the year.

Case 2: The man was told he was going to die at the age of 63. Prior to this, he sold his business, wound up all his affairs, and retired to a small town with his family. He ended up passing over in his late 90s.

The group members discussed this, and a general consensus was reached that you create your own reality: if you believe something very strongly, it will happen.

Case 3: (as shared by G) A baby was stillborn, yet the mother refused to accept this. She held onto the child, nurtured him, talked to him, and urged him to return to her, despite the doctors insisting that he was dead. Almost two hours later the child began to twitch. His hand tentatively reached out and grasped his father's finger. The mother put a drop of her milk on his lips, and he ingested this. He then proceeded to 'return to the living'. This was considered a miracle by all in the hospital.

Several other group members shared their personal experiences, but these three have been described, as they are referred to in the upcoming meeting.

(The Meeting begins)

All energy exists simultaneously and concurrently. Energies do not ‘suddenly arrive’ at a particular point in time. But they can only be accessed when you have achieved a commensurate level of energetic rarity. Let us explain this practically.

In the past, there were pre-planned exit points; but the current energies of re-assessing and choosing the exit point moment-to-moment also existed concurrently at that time.

It is just that most were unable to access this higher frequency, due to their old belief systems, thought patterns, rigid structures and lower vibrations. Therefore, even though the general rule of ‘three exit points in a life span’ held good; any individual who did not accept this structure could tap into the higher vibratory choice of exiting moment-to-moment. And then that would become his reality.

Similarly, even though you now know that you can make this choice 20-30 times a day; if you still choose to believe that you have only three exit points in your life, then that will be true for you.

This rule of energy holds good for all aspects of your life. As lightworkers, you are being urged to rarify your vibrations, tap into more expanded levels of energy, and in turn, offer others the same opportunity. You cannot force or coerce them to change; but you can show them a more expansive view.

Let us discuss three of the examples just mentioned:

The man who was told he was going to pass over before the onset of the millennium:

He did have a lot of earthly and spiritual awareness. He was a maverick, a person who broke boundaries and did things in his own way; but he could also be extremely rigid in some of his beliefs and patterns. In certain cases, he believed that black was black; here he would not allow for the possible existence of any shades of grey.

This opportunity was deliberately offered to him, to give him the chance to review his own belief system, and to possibly change it. He flirted with this in those moments when he said out aloud “Should I go or stay?”

This question was not directed externally, but was rhetorical. He was trying to go beyond the rigid boundary that had been defined for him (which he believed to be true) and to give self a new lease on life.

Had he chosen to go beyond this structure, his entire personality would have changed, mellowed and opened out. He would then have explored the self much further than he actually did, prior to his exit.

But because of his rigid belief structure in this area, he created his own passage. There was no ‘error’: it was a choice. He has been working, ever since, to open up his various limited perspectives, and to help others like him break their boundaries. His ‘error’ was therefore no error, as he did not waste this choice: he has used it productively to serve self and others.

Now let us look at the man who lived beyond his predicted exit point.

When he was told this, there actually was no exit point in sight. It was a completely inaccurate statement with reference to an exit point; but it was a completely accurate statement with reference to a major life lesson which he needed to learn. And that was to touch his power, and to stop giving it away to all those around him.

He was also being urged to re-examine his limited belief structures, not just in life and death, but in all areas of his life.

On earth, he played the role of a weak man; one who repeatedly allowed himself to be influenced by the opinions of all around him, particularly the women in his life. Not just his wife, but all the very dominating female members of his extended family.

He was imbalanced in both his masculine and his feminine sides, and therefore gave himself this opportunity to not give his power away to the astrologer, who simply reflected back to him his own dual imbalance.

Let us look at this astrologer more closely: by conceptualizing an inaccurate prediction, his feminine side was in imbalance. By then proceeding to reveal it to the client, his masculine side was in imbalance.

But of course the client created the event, as he was meant to hear it and yet triumph over it, by correcting his own masculine/feminine imbalances. And he did surmount it when the appointed death-date arrived.

Then why did he continue to live so long after that?

He gave himself a further time-span to overcome this issue in other areas of his life; but unfortunately he was not very successful. He did try repeatedly, and eventually understood that he would not be able to complete this study course on earth. He chose instead to return to the spirit realm, to work at it from a different perspective. By the way, he is still working on it.

Now let us look at the third case: that of the child in the mother's arms.

Here, this impetuous soul was vacillating till the very last minute. He is one who has always worked at break-neck speed, sometimes realizing too late that his choices are not the most appropriate for self- growth.

The child, after birth, attempted to retract out of fear. Fear of the suitability of the upcoming life ahead of him. The mother intuited this, and chose to nurture and counsel the child all the way through his indecisive moments. It may interest you to know that the child was not actually 'dead', but gave the appearance of this, as the soul continued to pop in and out of the physical body. Though the organs and bodily functions had relatively flat-lined; there was still an essence of life in the body.

The mother, through sheer perseverance, love and respect for the indecisive soul, offered him an understanding of what his life could be, should he choose to stay. She did not perform this act out of weakness or helplessness; but from the fullness of self. She continued to energize his physical body, giving the soul the opportunity to experience what it would be like to be loved and nurtured by an earthly mother.

This soul has never before incarnated on earth. For him, the process of anchoring in an earthy body was not only unfamiliar, but also extremely limiting and uncomfortable.

He is also one who has never really experienced love, as you know it. This does not mean that, as a soul, he is unloved or unloving. But he is accustomed to many Universal societies in which love is not the primary factor. He is more accustomed to being in a society in which knowledge, wisdom and intellect is the primary focus, the core essence of that society.

For this soul, the mother's love that he suddenly started experiencing was threatening, and yet alluring. Try and understand this from an earthly perspective, without judging the soul.

If you have always been an air-breather; and you suddenly choose to incarnate into a structure that only breathes in water; the moment you 'awaken' there, your instinctive response will be to reject the water, and fight for air. You do not yet understand that water will support you, not kill you.

He almost felt slaughtered by the energies of love on earth; and yet he slowly acclimatized and embraced motherly love.

Isn't love the greatest and most powerful energy in existence?

Yes...for earth, and many, many other societies as well.

Surely it is the core essence of the Universe?

Yes, it is one of several core essences of the Universe; but not the only one. Earth is based on love; and every single issue that you deal with has, within it, an aspect of love or the lack thereof.

But you also work with wisdom, knowledge, awareness, communication, sharing, teaching and so on. These attributes, from your perspective, are all based on the core essence of love. That is correct, as love is the core essence of planet Earth.

But there are other Universal societies which have different core essences. Our friend here is more accustomed to the core essence of wisdom and knowledge. He has also experienced love, but as an offshoot of the core of wisdom and knowledge. To him, a lack of this is as devastating as a lack of love is to you.

But you are correct: love is one of the five primary elements upon which the Universe is based. All five are intertwined: one cannot really be separated from the other.

So if I have come from another society with these attributes, they will still be within my current DNA. I would then bring that here, and it would become the base of my belief system. Conversely, if I went with love as my earthly core essence to another society, presumably knowledge would terrify me there. So does this mean that one clears all images and memories before taking such a gigantic leap?

(Smiling) Dear friend, you have just described Universal Cross-Pollination. Most inventors, scientists, technological mavericks, break-through medical practitioners, and true researchers are those who come from Universal societies where wisdom and knowledge are at the core center, not love.

Now this does not mean that they are incapable of giving and receiving love on earth; in fact most are highly passionate human beings. But they have come for a dual purpose: personal and public. Personally, they wish to now experience the flow of love, and to integrate it into their structure in a much more expanded form.

They begin with love for their work. A truly passionate scientist generally loves his work more than almost anything else in existence. Through that, he touches love for family, friends and so on. Stephen Hawkins is an excellent example: he has been to earth before, but resonates primarily with the core energies of knowledge, wisdom and science. Love comes after that to him. His personal mission was to experience earthly love: love of self, love of those around him, and the love of humanity.

On a world level, beyond the obvious aspect of taking the planet forward in scientific advancement, he has also come to implant the seeds of knowledge, wisdom and science, for others to integrate into their already loving structures.

In the future, many of you may choose to incarnate into a society based on wisdom and knowledge. In doing so, you will imbibe greater levels of knowledge and wisdom; and will simultaneously offer those beings the opportunity to touch and function with love.

Through this process of cross-pollination, all five primary core essences of the Universe slowly get evenly distributed. 'God's particle' is thus spread and fertilized.

So do I retain a memory of my core essence? Would I clear all of this before incarnating on earth?

There is a very careful selection process that takes place before you incarnate on earth. At a higher soul level, you may have a vast storehouse of knowledge of science, literature, mathematics and other such aspects.

You carefully examine all of these aspects, and regulate the flow of them into your earthly structure, to support the issues you wish to work out. This has to be carefully done. If you inappropriately open the floodgates of science, for example, you may then find yourself so absorbed in the pursuit of this field that you get diverted from your primary mission.

This process of selective energy is extremely intricately formulated by you, before you incarnate, with the help of a host of guides, Masters and spirit advisors. This is the primary process takes place; after which you select an appropriate set of host parents, a country, a timeline and other such circumstances to take you further on your quest.

An example: Most of you sitting in this room are, at soul level, high level mathematicians. And most of you will laugh at this statement. (Much laughter) Yes, we can hear your thoughts: “I can’t stand mathematics!” “I was a failure at it in school” “I can’t begin to understand it”. And yet we tell you that ONLY TWO PEOPLE sitting here in this room DO NOT have mathematics as a primary attribute of their extended structure. Only two.

(Pointing to a group member, who is giggling) And yes, you do too!

Yes, I know that!

Do not laugh! You are a mathematical Master, and yet you cannot add up numbers accurately.

(More laughter) Yes, I really can’t!

But it would not be appropriate for you to flood your earthly structure with this energy, as it would, given your nature, divert you from all that you have set out to learn and accomplish in this lifetime.

However, we share this information with all of you, as it is now your divine right to reach into your extended structure and access anything and everything you so desire, without permitting it to divert you from your chosen course.

If you could only believe in yourselves, you could choose to be, at any given point in time, a mathematical or musical or artistic genius at will; and yet put it aside at other times.

Another common factor in the room today: most of you have come from societies in which knowledge and wisdom, not love, has been the primary energetic core. All of you, therefore, have love as a quest on planet Earth. To explore and experience it to different degrees, and to experience the rejection of love as well.

There is not one person in this room who has not been emotionally hurt.

There is not one person in this room who has not experienced unrequited love.

There is not one person in this room who has not yearned with love for either a person or a situation that has remained out of her reach.

And yet you have come as teachers of love; teaching self and others how to access it.

Observe how beautifully you have combined the energies of your prior experiences with this one. You come from knowledge and wisdom, which will always be exciting to you. Self-growth, self-awareness, learning something new, exploring the Universe and always demanding the truth.

And you are furthering all of this through love. By learning to love the self, and everything around you.

Dear friends, if only you could see your higher souls as we see them! All of you have vast and complex mathematical formulae, so complex and so re-creative, moment-to-moment. Mathematical mavericks, all of you! Except two...and no, we will not name them! (Laughter)

So birth is more difficult than death?

Birth is a mathematical equation, pure and simple. Death is not quite that.

The time, place and method of entry is of extreme importance, and it sets into motion the various complex plans you have for the self. Even if, for example, you are born and then 'accidentally dropped' by the doctor; that too has been factored in for growth purposes.

Whatever happens to any child, upto the age of three months, has been meticulously planned and charted out by the soul. Even extreme circumstances, such as murder or rape, as shocking as this sounds, has been specifically planned by the soul for growth purposes.

Beyond this time period, you allow the energies of Earth, circumstance and free will to take you on a journey that you hope will be perfect for your evolution.

Compare this to a plane ride. The pilot has to be completely in charge of the aircraft during its initial take-off phase; after which he can switch over to auto-pilot.

Why three months?

In earth terms, this is a mathematical formula based on energy, time and vibration necessary for you to acclimatize to this planet and its evolutionary processes. A soul requires this precise time period to anchor and to fine-tune the appropriate strands in the physical body for its upcoming lifetime.

Even though you have pre-planned the appropriate energies necessary for the incarnation prior to your arrival, you still continue to fine-tune and adjust the process for the initial 3 months of your life.

From your perspective, during the first three months a baby appears to simply be taking in the new sights, sounds and other sensory stimuli of earth, which of course it does. But in actual fact, this period is one in which you are 'the most intelligent you will ever be' during the course of your lifetime.

Your connection with your higher soul and the spirit realm is so strong that you are not working with your infantile brain at all, except for very basic earthly functioning. But you are still working with the extensive 12-dimensional brain, in full connection with Masters, Guides and the Universe. These friends are in constant conference with you, and advise you how to adjust and fine-tune your frequencies, in preparation for the upcoming lifetime.

This requires such precision that divine mathematics takes over. Everything is formulated and calculated in perfection.

If you could see your brain for the first three months, it would appear as vast as your higher soul; because it is your higher soul. It is filled with the most beautiful mathematical equations that you constantly adjust and refine. After three months, you allow the mathematics to play out, and your life truly begins.

Death is slightly different. It is not a precise mathematical equation. Death depends on all the experiences you have garnered over a lifetime, how you have taken your life forward, what you have made of it, how much free will has been exercised, how you have coloured these experiences, and so on. You also have to factor in your moment-to-moment choice of the exit point.

The flow of mathematics does, of course, exist; but it is much more variable and fluid than your birth equation. And when you find a particularly pleasing energetic equation, you ride the flow and exit.

If death is also a mathematical equation of sorts, then how does one's belief system influence it? Is this also mathematical?

Every single thing on earth...your belief systems, patterns, structures, thoughts and actions...are all mathematical processes. It is only when you upgrade and refine the maths that all of these begin to change.

A belief structure that 'one particular community is evil' has a particular mathematical equation which is simplistic and rigid. It gives you only one answer. It is like combining two 2s, and only coming up with an answer of 4.

The moment you start pondering on this and playing with the numbers in different ways, you suddenly discover that you can not only add the two numbers together, but you can subtract one from the other, or divide one into the other, or even place them together to create 22. Suddenly these two 2s give you a whole series of possible outcomes, beyond just 4. Through this process (very simplistically described here) your belief structure starts opening up, and you begin to view communalism from a very much wider perspective. Similarly, two zeros, when played with, can form an 8 or even the symbol of infinity!

Everything you say, do, think and experience boils down to precise mathematics. Even if you contract cancer, the way you multiply the cancer cells in your body is based on internal mathematics.

Is this to do with sacred geometry or does it go beyond?

All of this is based on sacred geometry, but mathematics goes beyond that: it is the creative use and re-creation of sacred geometry. Mathematics, to the soul, is like air and water to you: the soul cannot exist without it.

How does mathematics factor into our tastes and preferences?

Two people can look at the same flower: one finds its appearance and fragrance pleasing, and the other does not. These two conclusions are arrived at by the mathematics of the flower which combines with the viewer's mathematics. In the first case, the two flow together and create a new and harmonious complex equation. In the second case, they do not.

This also applies to preferences in food, art, literature, music and so on.

Can we change this?

Of course you can! The more you expand and embrace complex mathematics, the more your tastes and preferences widen. You are now open to receiving many more stimuli.

There is obviously a mathematical equation between your husband and yourself. When you fight, these go awry. The sums don't work out! When you are in flow, these combine harmoniously and create complex new equations.

Now do you understand why we have urged you, over years, to embrace the study of science and mathematics? You cannot afford to ignore these subjects, if you desire to be true seekers of the light.

Of course we don't expect you to do so in a dull, boring, incomprehensible manner; as you possibly did in school. Explore its creativity. Its flow. Its magnificence.

Please teach us how to do this!

If you wanted to study art, could you do so in one meeting? You would have to take a blank canvas, play with colors, possibly go to a class, experiment on your own, and take it forward that way.

Play with numbers. Many of you enjoy the mathematics of a crossword puzzle, or Sudoku. Find interesting things that challenge you, and take them up. But you don't have to go the literal mathematical way, if that doesn't please you.

Try to find your inner mathematics. Intuit which numbers and combinations of numbers attract you. List them. Then do a little numerological research: find out what they mean, what their attributes are, and how they fit into your life.

Then intuit a string of numbers, and do the same with your research. Why have you chosen this particular sequence? What is this string telling you? Look up the numbers that correspond to your first name, your full name, your birth date, your children's names and let them reveal themselves to you. This is but a starting point.

Sir, I studied a branch of astrology that deals with pure mathematics. We were taught to combine numbers relating to various planets, constellations and so on, which give you mathematical answers with 48 digits. It has an interpretation which is amazingly accurate.

(Addressing the group) You have two friends, right here in this room (pointing to D and N) whom you can now inundate with questions about astrology, numerology and mathematics. Why not take advantage of this? Have fun! Plague them till you discover the joy of your inner mathematics. (All laugh)

Your thought processes are mathematics. Reasoning and Logic is mathematics. Intuition is mathematics.

Whenever you see a shell, a mollusk, its spiral formation has been proved to be perfect mathematics.

Indeed you are correct.

The basis of all creation is mathematics. When there was nothingness, and something emerged, there was A, which is one; U, which is zero; and M, which is infinite hum of the Universe, which comprises of every possible mathematical equation in creation. Such is the perfection of the AUM.

Mathematics is also music, because each varying sound or note is a combination of numbers, which is the basis of all creation.

Thank you! Here is a fun exercise: choose any piece of music that you really love, be it a piece of classical music, hard rock, or any other genre that excites you. Play it. Listen to it. Experience how its mathematics affects yours. Experience the merger of vibrations. If you are really interested, consult a musicologist to find out what its tones and rhythms really mean.

Why do we often respond to different types of music at different times in our lives?

At times when you crave vibrant music, for example, you do so for two predominant reasons. Your energies might be relatively suppressed or trapped, and you have intuited that the mathematical vibrations of the piece of music will help you open up. Or else you are already flowing strongly with that vibrancy, and you simply want to amplify it, for self and for others as well.

Each musical genre has its own spiritual significance. These have been discussed fully in a past meeting.

Very few people only resonate with one kind of music, or one genre. In general, you need the influence of various kinds of musical genres at differing points in your life.

Those people who actually dislike music of any form are in a deep depression. They may not be aware of this, and may even be able to function relatively normally in day-to-day life; but nonetheless, they are deeply depressed.

They are so deeply entrenched in this depression that if they permitted themselves to listen to music, it would do one of two things. It would either lead them out of the depression; or else cause such a strong emotional catharsis that it would kill them. They tend to fear either option, as they are familiar with and entrenched in their depressive state. They prefer 'the known devil to the unknown one'.

If your doctors, therapists and hospitals used music gently yet productively, they could reduce worldwide depression by 50%.

I keep seeing sacred geometrical patterns all the time, when in connection.

Your connection is now getting more and more refined and complex. This is likely to happen when you deal with your clients. If you find a blocked client, or you find that your sessions is not flowing as you would like it to; demand that a sacred geometrical structure be shown to you at that moment. Explore it, interpret it, and start flowing.

I have read that if you really want to know how the pyramids were built, you have to meditate on certain pieces of music by Bach. Apparently research has shown that the mathematical composition of his notes and musical phrases represent the exact dimensions of the pyramids.

You are correct. Let us now add to this. Pyramids, whether natural or man-made (to specific dimensions) are the highest resonators of music in the Universe.

For the benefit of several newcomers, let us remind you of certain information that has been shared with this group in the past.

A pyramid, on its own, is simply a terminal or a battery storage unit. It is an incomplete structure; just as a battery is, when left in its packaging. When a pyramid on earth comes into perfect alignment with a similar pyramidal structure on another planet (as facilitated by the rotation and revolution of these two planets), a beam of energy is activated between the two.

This energy is a combination of the mathematics of light and music, which suddenly reaches a crescendo. A moment later, with the continual rotation of the planets, the beam is then severed. The music does not die down, but it lessens in volume; leaving both pyramidal structures 'humming'.

We have just given you a very simplistic view of two individuated pyramids; but you must understand that there are millions of pyramids around the Universe, constantly engaging and disengaging with one another. If you could see their energies with the naked eye, you would see a celestial laser-beam show taking place before you; and the melodies of mathematics would come alive in glorious symphony. Imagine this cosmic music being produced, in this manner, moment-to-moment!

This music keeps the Universe alive. This is the Music of the Spheres. Without this music, nothing would exist. It is self-creating. It creates the next moment, and the next, and the next. All that Is.

The complexity of this music is unfathomable. Remember, planets and other such celestial bodies are constantly evolving. They change shape, size, speed of rotation and revolution, and their trajectory all the time. All of this makes for an infinite possibility of new pyramids aligning with one another, and new music being created, moment-to-moment. This is 144th dimensional music.

On earth, you have one-dimensional music. If one-dimensional music can move you so much, and bring up memories, pain, romance, love and wonderment; imagine what 144-dimensional music does for the Cosmos.

When you shed the body and enter the proverbial 'tunnel of light', which you have heard described as the most glorious possible experience; you are still only experiencing 7-dimensional music. Still, one to seven is a huge leap.

Even the greatest of Masters in existence cannot vibrate at 144 levels of music. Music supercedes everything.

WE LEAVE YOU NOW WITH OUR LOVE AND BLESSINGS. YOU ARE IN THE EMBRACE OF THE ST. GERMAIN.
