ALTERNATE DIMENSIONS

Greetings!

We have been speaking of the effects of the new planet on time and space; today let us speak of dimension.

Many of you are confused about this concept. Let's try and simplify this for you. You already know that the 'past, present and future' is an earthly, 3-dimensional concept. From the Universal perspective, all these exist simultaneously. For example, the 'you' in an incarnation in the 12th century exists simultaneously and concurrently with the current 'you' and with the 'you' in the 27th century. Time, from the Universal perspective, is simultaneous and current.

There are, however, alternative realms that also exist simultaneously and concurrently. They occupy the same space as you do, but vibrate at a different frequency. And because of the difference in this vibration, the two do not 'meet each other', even though they occupy the same space.

Earth has alternate dimensions; ones that are as 'real' as the one with which you are familiar. They occupy the same space that you do, but they have a different frequency.

On rare occasions, energetic rifts occur and two dimensions temporarily merge. This has frequently happened in the Bermuda Triangle. The magnetics there are such that rifts are created in time, space and dimension. But all the various disappearances that have taken place there have not been the same.

Some people have been transported through rifts in time. They have been moved into a different timeline of earth, and may have suddenly found themselves in this Earthly reality, but in a different century.

Spacial rifts transport people from one space to another; either on earth or onto another planet.

A time/space rift combines the effect of the two, moving people to another timeline and another physical space.

But some of the disappearances have been inter-dimensional. One of the most famous is the case of the Marie Celeste. To refresh your memory: this ship was found floating in the Bermuda Triangle, but all the people on board has mysteriously vanished. There was no evidence of any kind of natural disaster or attack. Everything else was left 'as-is'. Plates of half-eaten food were found on tables, with knives and forks in place. But all human life had completely disappeared.

In this particular case, the ship entered an inter-dimensional rift; one so specific that it only affected the molecules of the human body, and not those of inanimate objects. Those who matched this molecular rift were transported through it, whole and complete, and entered another dimension of Planet Earth.

How do people 'handle it' when this happens? Do they even survive?

In some cases, people do die: either of shock, or because their molecules are scrambled in the process of transportation. But most do not. They find themselves in another existence, and are naturally overwhelmed by confusion and trauma. But they then begin to acclimatize to the process.

Some actually shed the physical body in the transfer, but retain an energetic form in the new place; an existence as real as that of a human being, but in a different vibrational form.

None of these transfers have been 'accidents': they have all been higher-soul choices, for personal growth and evolution. Many who make this kind of daring choice are explorers at soul level; ones who desire the heightened experience of striding two completely different realms with the same consciousness. They are Universal soul-searchers and thrill-seekers.

So, if the passengers of the Marie Celeste had not desired this experience, they would not have been on that ship, at that particular time.

Did they have a memory of their prior existence, after they make the shift?

Generally, after a shift in time, people remember who they were and where they came from.

In a space-shift, they tend to lose track of who they were. They often begin life 'all over again', like an amnesiac.

In a dimensional shift, they do tend to retain a full memory of the past existence, but their mental faculties are tremendously upgraded in the process. So much so, that they now feel very different.

You spoke of possibly 'going into the past' in a time-shift. But how is this possible? The past is finished.

Dear friend, this has been explained at great length at prior sessions. You may refer to past transcripts if you are interested in learning about it. But let us touch upon this again, for the benefit of those who do not understand the concept of simultaneous time.

Imagine your higher soul to be a giant multiplex movie theatre; one in which thousands of films are running in different theatres. Each film is one of your incarnations, and each film is running at exactly the same time in each theatre. Yet, in each film you are playing a different role, set in a different timeline.

In one, you may be playing the 'you' in 2017 in Bombay. In another film, you are playing an 18th century cowboy; in a third you are playing a futuristic scientist; and in yet another you are playing a caveman, way back in time. Yet all these films are running simultaneously, at exactly the same show-time.

This is 'time' from our perspective. But when you come to earth, you exist in a 3-D reality, so you have to function within the limited framework of the past being behind you, the present being the now, and the future lying ahead of you.

We now demand that all of you continue to live a 3-D life, but simultaneously understand and touch concepts of 5-D. You must: you are all working towards striding the two, at will.

Let us move further. Most of you are familiar with "Lord of the Rings". This aptly describes a different dimension of Earth. Not Earth in your so-called timeline of past/present/future; but another dimension of Earth. This dimension exists right here, in the very same space as yours, but with a different energetic frequency. That's why the two do not merge. If they did, you would suddenly find yourselves amidst the warring factions of 'Middle Earth'. Tolkien, the author, was a channel who tapped into that existence and introduced his readers to another dimension of Earth.

(Smiling) Many of you feel very attracted to Unicorns. These have never existed on the Earth you know, in any of her timelines; but they do exist on Earth in a different dimension. There, they are as 'real' as horses are to you. And to the inhabitants of that dimension, the horse is a mythical creature.

So how we were introduced to Unicorns?

In your 'past', a lot of authors and artists were either conscious or unconscious channels; ones who were given glimpses of alternate dimensions and realities, and then translated them into the written word or the pictorial image. But how could they best offer these outlandish concepts to disbelievers? By using children's literature as an acceptable means of communication.

A child, when strongly influenced, will carry some of this into adulthood. Yes, his logical brain may then say, "There are no Unicorns, fairies, goblins, gnomes or pixies"; but somewhere within his psyche there is a secret 'knowingness'.

And yes, they all do exist. As do dragons; but in different dimensions of Earth.

What of the Loch Ness Monster?

He is an inter-dimensional traveller. He exists both here and elsewhere, and is able to stride the two realities, at will.

The current frequencies being emitted by the new planet are also going to open dimensional rifts. (Smiling) Don't worry; you are not going to vanish off the face of this planet. (Laughter) These are being deliberately created by the consciousness of the human race for educational and evolutionary purposes.

These are minor rifts, offering only those with a high-vibrational frequency, the opportunity to view or briefly visit different dimensions without losing their current reality.

This is going to spawn an exciting new wave of art, literature, film and music. Music is of prime importance here: the appropriate musicians will be able to draw, from alternate dimensions, new tones and frequencies to enhance Earth's evolutionary processes. We urge you to listen to this new music.

What exactly is a rift? It is a tear in the fabric of the Universe?

We use this term loosely, to help you understand the concept. In the past, certain rifts have been unintended tears in an energy field. But the current educational rifts are simply 'peep-holes' or windows; ones that you are going to command to open and close, at will.

Yes, you may now command an educational rift to open for you. But to do so, you will have to be at a high level of balance and internal meditation. You will need to calm and still the self, balance and align your energies to a relative degree of stability, and consciously raise your vibrations. This is imperative. If you are in energetic disarray and open a portal, it would be dangerous to the self.

So after you do this, the final 'key' is desire. You have to desire it strongly.

Then, in the meditative/day-dream/dream state, you will start getting little glimpses of a different dimension of Earth, or perhaps a view of the self in a different dimension. Please understand that you don't only incarnate in a linear timeline; you also, simultaneously, incarnate in alternate dimensions.

We cannot offer you a specific procedure for doing this: the journey will be unique to each person. But, in general, if you balance the self, move into a space of meditation, raise your vibrations and desire this strongly, you will surely create it. Have fun with this.

We suggest you suspend shock, disbelief and self-judgment: you may experience an aspect of the self that is seemingly distasteful to the current 'you'. Just observe it.

These windows are being deliberately created for you this year; so that you get to better understand WHO YOU REALLY ARE. Even alternative dimensional aspects are facets of the Self.

I have repeatedly experienced things missing from my home, without any logical explanation. None of them were of any monetary value...an ancient book on Yoga, for instance. And at one stage, I was psychically alerted that I might just 'disappear' from the planet. However, I was asked to resist this energy, and I did so. But the missing items are annoying me. Can 'things' also move into alternate dimensions?

Yes, they can. It's not common, and do not assume that everything in your homes that vanish have moved dimensions; but it can happen. An object that is not officially valuable, but has high energies, may align itself with a rift that appears and cross through.

If we witness something disturbing in another dimension, are we permitted to do something about it?

Most certainly. You do not have the energetic permission to change the course of events there, nor would you be able to do so; but you may send light, healing and blessings to the person or the situation you witness.

A Universal Rule states that Love may be given to anyone, at any time, fully and freely. There is no exception to this rule.

Do we get influenced or affected by aspects of the self in different dimensions?

Yes, you do; but minimally. You are primarily affected by the energies you generate and all that you experience in your current lifetime. You are secondarily affected by all the energies and experiences you are having in concurrent and simultaneous lifetimes (what you term your past, present and future).

The effect, however, of alternate dimensions on you is negligible, as there is only a miniscule spill-over. (Smiling) As of now!

THE ENERGIES THAT SPEAK TODAY ARE A JOYFUL UNION BETWEEN THE ST. GERMAIN AND THE EINSTEIN COLLECTIVE.
