A QUESTION AND ANSWER SESSION

ASCENSION

SOUL CREATION AND EVOLUTION

Prior to the meeting, Sohrab spoke of 'laziness'; and explained that this was generally a cover-up for an underlying fear. He urged the group not to address laziness directly, but to instead probe for what lay beneath. The example he gave was a child who was 'lazy' about studying for his exams. This could be a cover-up for his fear of failure. He further explained that in life, many people feared success more than failure.

This was followed by a general (unrecorded) question and answer session; the last point discussed being 'ascension'.

Greetings!

Let us add to what has just been discussed. In your educational institutions, you are required to achieve passing marks in all subjects in order to 'ascend' to the next academic year.

On occasion, you may fail in a certain subject. The authorities then have two choices. The first: to hold you back and insist that you repeat the entire year's course. The second: to allow you to keep term and re-appear for only that subject in which you have failed; thereby giving you the opportunity to possibly be promoted.

Now, you already know that all your incarnated aspects (in simultaneous timelines and dimensions) are in constant communication with each other, at a very high energetic level. This conglomerate acts as its own schoolmaster and attempts to educate every aspect of the extended self by transferring energies from one aspect to another, when needed. You are constantly ‘allowed to keep term’.

If one incarnated aspect requires a dose of strength and another has an abundance of this quality, the higher soul facilitates this transfer seamlessly. But it is still the free-will choice of the incarnated aspect to accept this energetic bounty... or not. In short: to study and pass the examination or to once again shirk responsibility and fail. Please note that we use the terms ‘pass’ and ‘fail’ loosely; simply to illustrate the point. In the grand scheme of things, there is no failure.

So, using the earlier example, if one aspect refuses to accept the energy of strength that it needs from another aspect of the self, it then ‘fails the exam’ and has to start working at generating its own strength from deep within. This process may take several more lifetimes.

However, even this is an honorable choice, as you are learning to generate it from the incarnated self, for the incarnated self. So here, ‘failure’ is actually success.

Now, when all the simultaneous incarnations are open to each other and flow smoothly, ‘thinking as one’; and have achieved a state of giving and receiving love freely, then full ascension takes place. In that instant, there is complete merger with All that Is.

Now let us touch upon an important point that has been shared with you at a prior session. Your grand Ascended Masters have ascended; but have not fully merged with the Source. They remain ‘one step away’; by choice. They do so to altruistically serve all of you, who are in the process of ascension.

You cannot begin to imagine how difficult it is to remain at that frequency, and not merge. It is like holding yourself at the brink of an orgasm and not permitting it to happen, even when every cell in your body is screaming out to you to surrender to the bliss.

Such is the Ascended Masters' magnificence; they deserve your honour and respect. They have nothing to personally gain from this; they simply do so to serve you.

Why can't they merge and still serve us?

Indeed they could. Of course the Source serves you. But if they merged completely, they would lose all names, labels and their energetic identity; attributes necessary for YOU. You still need them to hold a relatively finite name and form. You still need individuated qualities in your Masters; ones that inspire you to emulate them. You still need to be able to be inspired by a Buddha, a Jesus or a Mohammed. Very few people on earth would be as 'moved' by a shapeless, formless mass of pure consciousness.

Now let us have your general questions.

I think that fear is a distractor implant. Many are fears that may not even to you, but are ones implanted by authority figures, society and other lifetimes. Is this so?

Fear has most certainly been implanted in the various kingdoms of earth, other than the crystalline kingdom. It knows no fear.

However, fear is your friend, not your enemy. It helps keep you in balance, re-examine your coding and live responsibly. It indicates boundaries that may be dangerous to cross. But naturally, excessive fears or a complete lack of fear are both energetic imbalances.

If you had no fear of consequences, every time you had an argument with someone, you would take out a knife and kill them. Healthy fears safeguard your thoughts and actions and help you grow and evolve responsibly. Unhealthy fears (or the lack thereof) do the opposite.

I still don't understand why the Ascended Masters can't merge and yet be available to us, even formlessly. Surely we could still understand and accept their magnificent presence?

Let us give you an earthly example. When you are a child, you most certainly need the physical presence and physical attention of your parents. They see to your every need. They must be there to feed you, clothe you, guide you and physically comfort you in your times of need.

Would the effect be the same if they tried to do this long-distance? Would you feel as nurtured and comforted if they were simply an occasional voice over the telephone? Would you ever listen to their guidance? Would you feel that they actually love you and care for you? In all likelihood, you would develop severe abandonment issues and feel rejected and unloved. In the same way, you still need your Master-parents to be energetically 'present' to serve your every need.

Many years ago in a public meeting here, we all received an energetic implant from the Masters; one that we were told would upgrade our quotient of wisdom. I've often wondered what actually happened and whether this has actually worked for us...

(Smiling) Are you the same person you were, all those years ago? Are any of you? Would you have still grown without the implant? Of course. But at this accelerated rate? Not at all. Dear friend, please take a good look at the self! You have a new awareness of the self, along with wisdom and knowledge, and levels of tolerance, patience and acceptance that you never before had.

Did it really happen? Yes, it did. And in your individual case, it can be described as a 'hotline' to your own higher soul.

What is a soul and why does it need so many experiences?

Initially there was only Oneness...Consciousness...God. Call it what you will. Oneness wished to get to know itself; to experience itself. Don't you? If you call your brain Oneness, doesn't it wish to exercise itself? Doesn't your brain constantly want to stimulate itself with various sensory experiences? Doesn't it wish to study, learn and grow? So did Oneness.

To facilitate that, Oneness had to separate. It created The Big Bang. In doing so, the first 'experience' it had was separation itself. This gave rise to the concept of relationships. Two parts of Oneness now found that they still had a form of connection with each other. Through separation and relationships came other experiences: love for each other, distance, loneliness and so on.

As portions of Oneness further divided and subdivided up, planets and other celestial bodies were created. Sacred Geometric symbols (which are the DNA of Oneness) were strewn about, and formed groups and collectives. These gave rise to various species, group souls, and individuated souls.

The ones that originally grouped together formed the highest aspects of your soul. As they mutated and re-grouped, various incarnations were created. But each incarnation contains within it the original DNA of the Oversoul; and is therefore in connection with it at all times.

Naturally, each sub-division creates a further 'distance' from the Source. But this is necessary to give rise to another magnificent tool for growth: free-will. Without this distance and without separation, there would be no individuation and therefore no free-will.

Let us give you an earthly parallel to help you understand this concept. When you live at home, under the strict care and guidance of your parents, you rarely discover exactly what your personal values are, what your belief systems are, what your moral coding is and so on. They tend to get blurred with those of your parents.

But there comes a time when you mature and leave home, perhaps to study abroad. You are suddenly separated from direct parental influence. This may bring about loneliness and separation, but it also offers you the opportunity to spread your wings.

Your parents may still be long-distance influences over the phone, but you are now free to discover your own values, belief systems and coding. You learn to take responsibility for your thoughts, words and actions. You now have no option but to do so. From that comes growth.

Would it have been right for the parents to say, “You may never leave the house.”? Of course not. Ideally, parents should say “Fly free! We are always there to guide, support and advise you. But go out there and find out who you are.”

Oneness did just this. It gave you the opportunity to be individuated souls, explore the self, make mistakes, learn from them, grow and evolve. And no matter what, Oneness is always a part of you. It cannot be otherwise.

(Smiling) Now, as you well know, the greatest playground in which to go off-track and learn from your mistakes is...Planet Earth. You are all grand explorers to have chosen a rough hiking holiday, instead of an easier 5-star vacation package in a more evolved society.

Do you have any sense of our energies? How do they make you feel?

(Various group members answer)
